

Vorzavur was born in a small mountain village called Benrum. As a child, Vorzavur helped his parents on the family farm. But one day when he came back from collecting wood, he saw some masked thieves killing his whole family and burning down the farm. He froze in fear, but then one of the thieves saw him and started walking towards Vorzavur. When the thief grabbed Vorzavur, Vorzavur went berserk. He went into a deep psychotic rage. He started punching, kicking, biting and scratching the thieves. Vorzavur killed almost all the thieves, but one managed to escape, and the escaped thief was badly wounded. Shortly after this incident, people in town began calling Vorzavur "The Rage Demon" because he easily flew into a rage and attacked recklessly. When Vorzavur turned 50, the Dwarven Army recruited him for the special unit called "The Bronze Tanks". This special force is mobilized as the first line of defense in case of an enemy attack. To suppress Vorzavur's rage, the army gave him a special amulet that suppresses his power. This power is controllable and strengthens Vorzavur enormously. With this power, his strength, endurance and stamina are very high.

Because of these special skills and his strength, he managed to climb the ranks. After a few months in this special unit, he became a major. His preferred weapon was a two-handed war hammer called "Willbreaker". Through years of training and experience Vorzavur has learned to control his rage without the amulet, but sometimes he goes full berserk. While on guard duty, Vorzavur learned from some townspeople that the escaped thief who had killed his family held the title of duke. Vorzavur gets angry, because this thief belongs in prison for his crimes. Then he raged so much that the amulet he wore to control his rage began to break and lose its powers. Vorzavur was out for revenge. He masked himself and went to the castle where the duke/thief lived and killed him in front of his wife. Then he fled, taking with him the mask and the dagger with which he had killed the duke. After that, he reached an inner piece, knowing that he had done a good thing. But the thought that someone might find out still crossed his mind. So he had left the special unit and made his way across the land of Fraodan. As he travelled through the land, Vorzavur carried his trusty warhammer, a hand axe, and a backpack with water, food, some rope, and a sleeping bag. Occasionally Vorzavur would help defend the villages and earn some gold.

From certain sources he learned that help was needed on a distant island. So Vorzavur decided to embark on an adventure to see what help he could offer.
